The concept of wives' submission to their husbands is a topic that has been debated and discussed for centuries. It is a topic that has been met with both support and opposition, and it is one that continues to be a source of controversy in the Christian community.

In this article, I will explore the biblical perspective on wives' submission to husbands. I will examine the concept of submission, its limitations, and its benefits. I will also provide practical tips for wives who are seeking to submit to their husbands in a way that honors God.

What is Submission?

The word "submission" comes from the Greek word hupotasso, which means "to place oneself under the authority of another." In the context of marriage, submission means that a wife voluntarily places herself under the leadership of her husband. This does not mean that she gives up her own thoughts and opinions, but rather that she chooses to defer to her husband's decisions.

Submission is not about power or control. It is about respect and love. A wife who submits to her husband is not a weakling. She is a strong woman who chooses to put her husband's needs above her own.

The Limitations of Submission

It is important to note that submission is not absolute. There are limits to a wife's submission. A wife should not submit to her husband if he asks her to do something that is against God's law or her conscience.

For example, a wife should not submit to her husband if he asks her to lie, cheat, or steal. She should also not submit to her husband if he asks her to do something that would harm her or her children.

The Benefits of Submission

There are many benefits to wives who submit to their husbands. First, submission creates a more peaceful and harmonious home. When a wife submits to her husband, she creates an environment where her husband feels respected and loved. This leads to a stronger and more fulfilling marriage.

Second, submission helps wives to grow in their faith. When a wife submits to her husband, she is humbling herself and putting her trust in God. This can lead to a deeper relationship with God and a greater understanding of His will for her life.

Third, submission can help wives to experience greater joy and fulfillment in their marriage. When a wife submits to her husband, she is demonstrating her love for him and her desire to please him. This can lead to a more fulfilling and satisfying sexual relationship.

Practical Tips for Submission

If you are a wife who is seeking to submit to your husband, there are a few practical tips that can help you:

1. Pray for your husband. Pray for his leadership, his wisdom, and his protection. Pray that God would help you to be a supportive and submissive wife.
2. Respect your husband. Treat him with respect and kindness, even when you disagree with him. Let him know that you value his opinion and that you appreciate his leadership.
3. Support your husband. Be there for him through thick and thin. Encourage him and support his dreams. Let him know that you believe in him and that you are always on his side.
4. Be submissive in your words. Choose your words carefully when you speak to your husband. Avoid being critical or disrespectful. Instead, speak to him in a gentle and loving tone.
5. Be submissive in your actions. Show your husband that you are willing to follow his lead. Do what he asks you to do, even if you don't agree with him. Let him know that you trust his judgment and that you are committed to supporting him.

Wives' submission to husbands is a biblical concept that has been met with both support and opposition. However, when it is understood and practiced in a healthy way, submission can be a powerful force for good in a marriage. It can create a more peaceful and harmonious home, help wives to grow in their faith, and lead to greater joy and fulfillment in marriage.

If you are a wife who is struggling to submit to your husband, I encourage you to seek out godly counsel. There are many resources available to help you understand the biblical concept of submission and how to apply it in a healthy way.
